Who Says? The Writer's Research is an innovative and brief

research guide focusing on information literacy.

The text shows students not only how to do research but also why
research is important.

Written for today's college student, Who Says? addresses
contemporary research issues head on: - What does it mean to conduct research in an age when we are bombarded by

collaborative

information through online media and databases like

Wikipedia? - Who owns
this information? How do we know? - As information circulates
and changes, do the lines between audience and author blur? - How should these changes alter our expectations as readers and as writers?

By prompting students to think critically about matters of ownership and authority, Who Says? not only shows students how to find and incorporate credible sources in their writing, but also encourages students to synthesize their own ideas with the ideas of others, leading them to develop more confident and compelling voices as writers.

In Personal Effects, Holdstein and Bleich
compile a volume that cuts across the grain of current orthodoxy.

These editors and contributors argue that it is fundamental in humanistic scholarship
to take account of the personal and collective experiences of scholars, researchers, critics, and teachers. With this

scholars move us to explore the intersections of the social with subjectivity, with voice, ideology, and culture,
and to consider the roles of these in the work of academics who study
writing and literature.

Taken together, the essays in this collection carry forward the idea that the personal, the candidly subjective and intersubjective, must be part of the subject of study in humanities scholarship. They propose an understanding of the personal in scholarship that is more helpful because more clearly anchored in human
